

April 5, 2006

Please write your message here. Take note of the style tips and talking points in the sidebar.

I recently saw a film called "the Corporation". It was a real eye opener and delved into corporations, how they work and the increasing privatization of all the resources on the planet that used to be free.

I believe as a nation we are already overly focused on business and profits above all else and that this is a very unhealthy trend that will ultimately lead to our self destruction.

Most of the worlds eco systems are already in decline in large part due to this disregard for maintaining the health of our planet for us and future generations in favor of going for the quick fast buck. This is the same way that cancer behaves, which ultimately commits suicide by killing it's host.

I for one am standing up and saying no to this insanity. I believe the move for a bank of walmart is part and parcel of this same mentality that seeks to monopolize power and set it's own rules. These rules are for the benefit of walmart, not people or the environment. It is too late in the day for these shenanigans we need to unite for the future life of our planet, and not allow corporations to function outside the ethics of what is right for present and future generations. As the old saying goes, power corrupts and absolute power corrupts absolutely. Therin lies the danger inherent when a systems loses it's balance and too much power is wielded by too few.

Ingrid Gordon